

Why Astroglide?

Astroglide was created by Daniel Wray, a former NASA aerospace chemist, while working on the Space Shuttle Program. After experimenting with nearly 300 different formulas, Astroglide personal lubricant was finally perfected. With extraordinary lubricating and moisturising properties, the water based, nontoxic formula mirrors natural body fluids to near perfection. Unlike most other personal lubricants, Astroglide retains its lubricating properties for hours without becoming sticky or gritty and only small quantities need to be applied. It is now one of the World's best selling personal lubricants and its formulation is superior to many copy cats that have appeared.

Developed to the highest quality standards and TGA approved (ARTG No 151910) in Australia, Astroglide provides whisper-light lubrication for enhancing the comfort and ease of intimate activity. Developed to mimic natural body fluids, Astroglide not only lubricates, but also acts as a moisturiser for vaginal dryness. Astroglide's long-lasting super-slick formula is pH balanced, water-based, water-soluble and petroleum free. Astroglide will intensify the pleasure and sensitivity for both partners. It is the perfect ingredient for increased sexual fun.

In comparison with some other liquids and gels, Astroglide is

- Silky smooth
- Much long lasting , will not dry out
- Latex safe
- Non-irritating
- Clear
- Fragrance-free
- Hormone-free
- Animal Products - free
- Flavour-free
- Mimics the body's own lubricating fluids

Only Astroglide's trade secret formula is soothing, moisturising, and virtually indistinguishable from natural vaginal moisture. It provides the highest level of slipperiness and retains its lubricating property for hours. It does not develop a rough, gritty feeling, does not become sticky, and does not interfere with natural pH levels. No other lubricant provides the same level of comfort, ease of use, and natural feel. Astroglide is non-irritating and leaves no residue and stains or marks.

Anyone who wants to take their sexual relationship to a new level of excitement. Astroglide allows couples to achieve heightened sensitivity and pleasure. Astroglide also makes safer sex more fun. It makes condom use more pleasant, making safer sex a reality for more people. In addition, women suffering from vaginal dryness can use Astroglide not only as a lubricant, but also as a moisturiser.

When used during intimate activity, Astroglide definitely heightens sexual pleasure for both partners. In her book, To Be Alive, Carol Runowicz says, "Men go crazy: they call it Astroheaven." When used with a condom, Astroglide's slippery friction intensifies pleasures and, at the same time, provides a greater sensation of warmth and closer body contact, heightening pleasure and creating a stronger sense of intimacy.

Since Astroglide is a water-based, water soluble personal lubricant, it is safe to use with condoms. Only water-based lubricants should be used with condoms. Petroleum-based products (Vaseline, baby oil or mineral oil) can break down latex, increasing the risk of pregnancy or sexually transmitted diseases. In addition, moisture creams, some gels and lotions can interfere with vaginal pH levels and can cause irritation or even yeast infections.

Astroglide is not a spermicide and will not kill sperm. Studies have shown, however, that Astroglide as well as other topical lubricants do inhibit the motility or movement of sperm. Knowing this, if you choose to use Astroglide, we suggest using a small amount applied to the outer area. Discontinue use if conception is not achieved in a reasonable amount of time. It is always advised to consult your Doctor first and to follow his or her recommendation.

Astroglide will not cause a yeast infection, however, there have been several women's journals citing glycerin as a source of yeast infections. This is not true! In fact, some yeast infection cures contain glycerin. An existing yeast infection can be made worse by using products containing a large percentage of glycerin. This is because the sugars in glycerin act as a food source for the yeast. Women who are prone to yeast infections should use a lubricant that does not contain glycerin.

At some point in their lives, the majority of women will experience vaginal dryness. The causes can be anything from low estrogen levels to outside factors such as chemotherapy or radiation therapy, tampons, condoms or diaphragms. Taking antihistamines or decongestants will interfere with your vaginal moisture, as will washing with certain soaps. For most women, however, vaginal dryness is a direct result of lowered estrogen levels. This occurs during pregnancy or following childbirth, and when a woman enters perimenopause or menopause. Nursing, menstrual cycle changes, contraceptives, infertility drugs, hysterectomy or related surgeries, fatigue, stress and rigorous exercise also may contribute to reduced levels of estrogen.

Some symptoms such as vaginal itching, burning or irritation and pain, whether constant or intercourse-related, should be brought to the attention of your Doctor and may be treated with hormone replacement therapy (HRT). Vaginal dryness may also be alleviated by increasing your water intake or with Kegel exercises to increase circulation to the pelvic area and help boost production of vaginal moisture. Using a personal lubricant in conjunction with any of the foregoing is recommended.

Astroglide Personal Lubricants are the perfect choice to enhance the comfort and ease of intimate activities. Astroglide's unique whisper-light formula is water-based, water-soluble and 100% petroleum-free, making it safe to use with latex condoms and truly "Second Only to Nature."
