Astronaughty – A History of Astroglide's Ride To The Top?

When it comes to sex - it doesn't take a rocket scientist to think of a good idea, but in Dan Wray's case it certainly didn't hurt.

The former Space Shuttle biochemist is the brain behind Astroglide, the personal lubricant responsible for making sex out of this world.

It's quite a change from the Space Shuttle to personal care products. But, super-lubricants were always his field of endeavour - his work on the Space Shuttle resulted in six patents in the field of aerospace technology.

A veteran lubricant genius, Wray began years of research and experimentation resulting in over 300 test formulas, until he found what he was looking for... a non-gritty, hormone free - lubricious aid. His new water-based formula worked so well, in fact, it's earned the nickname "astroheaven."

Today, Biofilm produces a variety of Astroglide Brand Products that help make duets and solo and other performances extra slippery.
