

How to Get Away When a Romantic Getaway Beckons?

Be Ready at a Moment's Notice!

What's more romantic than a weekend getaway for two -- unfettered, uncomplicated.

Make it a tryst at a secluded beach house, pampered days and amorous nights at a quaint country inn, or a whirlwind visit to the bright lights of the big city. But for maximum romance, make it spontaneous and impulsive, a true lover's escape.

Of course, the best spontaneity takes a little planning! Start with a getaway bag packed and ready to go as you're swept away on your journey. What should you pack? For practical purposes, you'll need the usual toiletries and grooming items, but consider some intriguing incidentals...

- A Toast to Romance...Bring something bubbly or not. Whatever your drink of choice, tuck one in your tote bag with two romantic glasses, like champagne flutes. On arrival, just pour and watch things heat up.

- To Set the Stage...select a seductive scent - whatever appeals to you both and will set the mood for the adventure you're planning. Fragrant candles and lotions are a wonderful way to get the weekend's festivities started.

- The ABC's of Romance: Astroglide, Birth Control, and Condoms...You've thrown off the fetters of the commonplace -- not common sense. Sexy, exciting and just this side of naughty. When you want to set off fireworks, Astroglide is the spark. Be sure to add a few drops Astroglide to the inside and outside of the condom, not only does it feel out of this world, but it also reduces condom-breaking friction. Unlike other lubes, you don't need to use much Astroglide, a couple of drops on him or the inside of the condom, will make it feel like its not there, and he will appreciate that and so will you.
